

Revelation and Inspiration

SABBATH AFTERNOON

Read for This Week's Study: Heb. 1:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:15–17; 2 Pet. 1:18–21; Exod. 17:14; Rev. 1:19; Ezek. 4:1–8.

Memory Text: “The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave Him to show His servants—things which must shortly take place. And He sent and signified it by His angel to His servant John, who bore witness to the word of God, and to the testimony of Jesus Christ, to all things he saw” (Revelation 1:1, 2, NKJV).

The apostle John had been part of the inner circle of the Twelve Apostles (Luke 8:51; Matt. 17:1; Matt. 26:36, 37). After Christ's ascension, he continued his ministry, in Jerusalem. Yet, before the fall of the city (A.D. 70), he moved to Ephesus in order to oversee churches in the Roman province of Asia Minor. During the Christian persecution under the Roman emperor Domitian, the apostle was exiled to Patmos, an island in the Aegean Sea.

On Patmos, John received special prophetic messages that were addressed not only to the seven churches of Asia Minor but also to Christians throughout the ages (Rev. 1:1–3, 9–11). The prophetic message delivery chain, of which John was a part, looked something like this: God the Father, to Jesus Christ, to the angel, to the apostle John, and to the readers and hearers. This is a classic example of the revelation-inspiration process in which God uses prophets to communicate His messages to humanity.

This week's lesson specifically examines the multiform revelation-inspiration process, with special focus on the oral, written, and dramatized ways the divine message has been communicated to human beings.

* Study this week's lesson to prepare for Sabbath, October 31.

General and Special Revelation

Read Hebrews 1:1, 2. Why is God so interested in speaking to us? What is He telling us through Jesus and the prophets?

What would the Creator of the cosmos have to say to us? Why does He communicate with us? It is because we are fallen human beings in a sinful world and face death, suffering, and trials; God, therefore, speaks to us because He wants us to know why we are here, why things are so bad, and why, despite it all, we can hope in His love for us.

God's general revelation, as seen in the natural world, speaks eloquently of His infinite power and caring love. King David exclaimed, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament shows His handiwork" (Ps. 19:1, NKJV). The apostle Paul added, "For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes, that is, His eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived, being understood by what has been made, so that they are without excuse" (Rom. 1:20, NASB).

It is also amazing to reflect on God's restoring power manifested in the mysterious healing processes in our world. Indeed, "God's healing power runs all through nature. If a tree is cut, if a human being is wounded or breaks a bone, nature begins at once to repair the injury. Even before the need exists, the healing agencies are in readiness; and as soon as a part is wounded, every energy is bent to the work of restoration."—Ellen G. White, Education, p. 113.

As beautiful and instructive as the natural world can be, it reveals not only God's power and love but also the presence of evil (see Gen. 3:14–19, Matt. 13:24–30). This ambiguous message can be properly understood only in light of God's special revelation—in both Jesus Christ, the incarnate Word of God, and in the Bible, the Written Word of God that testifies of Him (John 5:39).

The Scriptures are the inspired record of God's messages to all human beings throughout the ages. They tell us about the Creation of the world and its tragic fall, and about God's amazing plan of redemption and the final restoration of planet Earth. As brief and selective as some biblical narratives can be, they are always reliable, because it's God speaking to us (see 2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:19–21).

Though nature surely points to the reality of the Creator's power and love, why do we still so desperately need the Written Word, as well? What does the Word tell us that nature, in and of itself, doesn't?

The Process of Inspiration

Many books and writings, not just the Bible, have come down to us through the ages. And yet, we deem the Bible as the Word of God. What separates it from other writings?

Read 2 Timothy 3:15–17 and James 1:17. What important message should we take from these verses?

There is some discussion about the best translation of 2 Timothy 3:16, but most Bible translations render this passage in a similar way, emphasizing that the whole Bible is of divine origin (2 Pet. 1:20, 21).

One Bible commentator explains that “it seems more likely that Paul is contemplating scripture as a whole here and that he would say that the whole of scripture is ‘profitable for teaching, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness,’ than that every scripture passage is profitable in these ways.”—G. W. Knight III, The Pastoral Epistles: A Commentary on the Greek Text (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1992), p. 445.

But how should we understand the inspiration process that originated in the Bible? We should recognize that prophetic inspiration is the Holy Spirit assisting true prophets for the reliable communication of divine messages. That assistance is provided not only in the process of receiving the messages but also in communicating the messages clearly to their recipients.

God’s messages came through visions and dreams (Num. 12:6; Isa. 6:1, 8). God also used eyewitnesses (1 John 1:1–3), Spirit-inspired historical research (Luke 1:1–3), and divine impressions on the mind (2 Pet. 1:21). Regardless of the means used by the Holy Spirit, the prophets and biblical authors were given objective, rather than subjective, messages of truth to be shared. That is, God’s messages were not to be tampered with or in any way distorted by His messengers, even if they used their own words to express those messages.

The task of communicating prophetic messages to their original audiences could be done orally (2 Pet. 1:19–21), in written form (John 20:30, 31), or even through dramatization (Ezek. 4:1–8).

Though many questions remain about how the Bible was inspired, or how inspiration works in general, why is it so important to trust the Bible as God’s inspired Word, regardless of what we may not fully understand about how it was written?

Oral Messages

Read 2 Peter 1:18–21. What assurance do we have that the oral messages delivered by God’s prophets were as inspired and reliable as the written ones?

God spoke to Adam and Eve before the Fall (Gen. 2:16, 17) and after (Gen. 3:9–19). In both cases, they perfectly understood His words. His voice was heard in clear terms also at Sinai (Exod. 20:1–20), as well as at the baptism and the transfiguration of Jesus (Matt. 3:17, Matt. 17:5). We might misinterpret when other people talk to us. But, surely, when God talks to anyone, there will be no miscommunication or deception.

The Bible affirms that “God spoke to Moses and said to him: ‘I am the LORD’ ” (Exod. 6:2, NKJV). Many Bible writers acknowledged hearing the voice of God as He spoke to them. This was the case, for example, with Isaiah (Isa. 8:1, 11), Jeremiah (Jer. 1:4, 9, 11), and Ezekiel (Ezek. 3:16, Ezek. 6:1). Any attempt to deny these and other similar claims ends up questioning the honesty of the prophets and the reliability of the Bible itself.

As God spoke to the prophets in an intelligible human language, so did the prophets to their respective audiences. For instance, Noah was a true prophet of God and a faithful “preacher of righteousness” (2 Pet. 2:5). He did not write any portion of the Bible, but he delivered God’s message orally to his contemporaries, and his message was no less inspired than the writings of the canonical prophets.

Several other prophets, including Nathan, Elijah, Elisha, and John the Baptist, never wrote any portion of the Bible; instead, they delivered their message orally.

And what about Jesus Christ Himself? The Gospel record mentions that, during His earthly ministry, He “wrote on the ground with His finger” (John 8:6, NKJV). That’s it. We have no record of Jesus’ writing anything else. But He taught and preached orally “as one having authority” (Matt. 7:29, NKJV). Some of His listeners even confessed, “No man ever spoke like this Man” (John 7:40, 46, NKJV). Jesus was primarily an oral communicator of God’s messages. His messages were no less authoritative or binding simply because He Himself did not write any books of the Bible.

How fascinating that God has prophets who had no writings in the Bible. Why do these noncanonical prophets also carry authority?

Written Messages

Some famous speeches have deeply impacted people's lives and even changed the course of history. If these speeches were not recorded, the words would have faded or become distorted with the passage of time. Thus, writing gives permanence to the spoken word, and that permanence allows the message to be transmitted through time.

Shortly after the Israelites left Egypt and defeated the Amalekites, God instructed Moses to "write this for a memorial in the book" (Exod. 17:14, NKJV). Beginning with Moses, who authored the first five books of the Bible, Psalm 90, and Job, the Holy Spirit guided the canonical prophets to produce the writings that now comprise the 66 books of the Bible.

Read Exodus 17:14; John 20:30, 31; 1 Corinthians 10:11; and Revelation 1:19. What are some of the reasons God asked His prophets to write down the messages that He gave them?

The various books of the Bible reflect the literary style and skills of their respective writers. As we will discuss in next week's study, the personal nuances and various styles of each author don't take away from their messages, because there are no "degrees" of inspiration. Some parts of the Bible are obviously more relevant and applicable to our lives and faith today than are other parts. But this truth doesn't make one part of the Bible more inspired than another part.

Sometimes Bible writers recorded the inspired messages that they first delivered orally, by themselves, or by a trusted associate. In the book of Deuteronomy, Moses recorded the last speeches that he made to the Israelites before his death. The four Gospels register many of the sermons and teachings of Jesus during His earthly ministry.

But there are instances in which prophets quoted non-inspired sources (Acts 17:28, 1 Cor. 15:33, Titus 1:12) and even the words of Satan (Gen. 3:1–5, Matt. 4:1–11).

We should remember that as the prophets recorded the feelings and desires of other people, they also expressed their own human reactions (see Dan. 8:27; Rev. 22:8, 9). Furthermore, the Bible describes many good examples to be imitated but also many bad ones to be avoided (1 Cor. 10:1–11).

While reading the Bible, we should keep in mind that, while not written in perfect language, it carries an infallible message that will stand the test of time.

Drama, Symbols, Parables

The Bible has a rich variety of word pictures and metaphors. For example, the whole Old Testament sacrificial system of patriarchal altars, the Mosaic tabernacle, and the temple in Jerusalem was a pictographic representation of Christ's atoning sacrifice on the cross and His heavenly priesthood (Heb. 8:1–6).

In the prophecies of Daniel, the kingdoms and powers in the world were represented by the different parts of a great image (Dan. 2:31–45), various animals and horns (Daniel 7 and 8), and two kings (Daniel 11). Similar representations appear also in the book of Revelation, as in the case of the two beasts of chapter 13.

In His teachings, Jesus spoke of Himself, for instance, as the Bread of Life (John 6:35, 41–58), the Light of the world (John 8:12, John 9:5), and the True Vine (John 15:1–8). And through the parable of the sower (Matt. 13:1–9, 18–23) and several other ones (Matt. 13:24–52, etc.), Jesus illustrated the nature and growth of His kingdom.

Read Ezekiel 4:1–8. Why do you think God not only spoke verbally but also dramatized some of His messages?

A vivid dramatization appears in Ezekiel 4:1–8, where God asked the prophet to make a miniature model of Jerusalem and to lay himself down, first on his left side for 390 days, representing the house of Israel, and then on his right side for 40 days, representing the house of Judah. Another visual experience was Hosea's divinely ordained marriage to Gomer, a prostitute, representing Israel's spiritual unfaithfulness to God (Hos. 1:2–9).

The dramatic experiences of Ezekiel and Hosea seem quite shocking today. But that was the point: they were supposed to be shocking, not just to us but also to the people back then. At a time when the warnings of the prophets were openly rejected (see 2 Chron. 36:15–21), the last act of divine mercy was to dramatically alert the people to their true condition in order to lead them to genuine repentance. Such a dramatic presentation certainly should have shown them how seriously they should have taken God's warning to them.

What kind of dramatization might someone do today to warn us about, say, being Laodicean? (See Rev. 3:14–18.)

Ellen G. White on Revelation and Inspiration

Seventh-day Adventists believe that Ellen G. White was divinely inspired. Her writings, life, and ministry meet the criteria of a true prophet. She possessed the same quality of inspiration as Bible prophets, though she never considered her writings to be the same as Scripture. On the contrary, Ellen G. White always uplifted the Bible. But how did she herself understand God's prophetic revelations to her and the process of her inspiration?

First, Ellen G. White always considered the Bible as the authoritative and infallible revelation of God. The Bible reveals God's truth and His plan of salvation for the fallen human race. In that process, as we are learning, He uses prophets to communicate His messages.

Second, Ellen G. White recognized that the process of inspiration involved divine-human interaction. God communicated His messages, but then the prophet would convey the divine instruction using his or her own words. As Ellen G. White put it: "It is not the words of the Bible that are inspired, but the men that were inspired. Inspiration acts not on the man's words or his expressions but on the man himself, who, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, is imbued with thoughts. . . . The divine mind and will is combined with the human mind and will; thus the utterances of the man are the word of God."—Selected Messages, book 1, p. 21.

In relation to visions and prophetic dreams, Ellen G. White understood "thought inspiration" as a union of divine revelation and human experience. She wrote, " 'The Bible, with its God-given truths expressed in the language of men, presents a union of the divine and the human.' "—Selected Messages, book 1, p. 25. God used many ways to produce an understanding of His message in the mind of His messenger. These included picture representations, words, and thoughts that engaged all the prophet's senses. Ellen G. White's experience was similar to that of Bible writers.

Third, Ellen G. White noted that not all of her human experiences and communications were inspired. "There are times when common things must be stated," she advised, "common thoughts must occupy the mind, common letters must be written and information given that has passed from one to another of the workers. Such words, such information, are not given under the special inspiration of the Spirit of God."—Selected Messages, book 1, p. 39. It is important to realize this distinction as we read and relate to her writings and experiences, particularly her correspondence and diaries.

Knowing Ellen G. White's understanding of revelation and inspiration helps us avoid extremes and read her counsels prudently with understanding.

To discover more, visit <https://whiteestate.org/absg/5>.

From Despair to Destiny

In the bitter cold of January 1906, a young Slovenian named Albin Močnik stood on a bridge in Bremerhaven, Germany, contemplating suicide. But just as he teetered on the edge of despair, a stranger intervened, directing him to a pair of Adventist shoemaking families who would unknowingly change the course of history for the Balkans.

Močnik moved in with the Schiefers and Banas families. Their quiet witness stirred his heart, and, by March 1906, he was baptized. This marked the beginning of a lifelong mission that would shape the Adventist Church in the former Yugoslavia.

Soon after his baptism, Močnik attended a German Union conference that was held in Friedensau, unaware he was the first Slovene Adventist. Encouraged by John F. Huenergardt to serve his own people, he enrolled in the Friedensau school, where his passion for mission grew. He began translating and distributing Sabbath School materials in Serbo-Croatian.

In 1908, Albin's dream took form. Upon completing his studies, he went to Croatia with Pastor Robert Schillinger. Though hindered by language barriers and legal obstacles, Močnik shared the gospel in Zagreb and Split. He moved into Srem, then part of Croatia, and ventured into Serbia, preaching and baptizing new believers, often at the cost of imprisonment.

Despite recurring illness and political opposition, Močnik never abandoned his mission. During World War I, he endured army service, severe health conditions, and the grief of separation from his growing family. Yet even in convalescence, he produced the first Adventist hymnal in Serbo-Croatian, composing 120 songs himself.

After the war, Močnik led efforts to counter the divisive Reform Movement and rebuild the Adventist Church. This movement started before World War I, when differing opinions on military service arose among German Adventists. Eventually, Albin's ministry bore fruit: he revitalized the church, raised up new leaders, and, by 1925, was elected the first president of the Yugoslav Union Conference.

As president, Močnik gave the Adventist faith a public voice in a hostile political climate. His 1925 book Adventism clarified church beliefs to the government and helped secure legal recognition for the denomination. He spearheaded translation work and edited the church paper Glasnik. He also founded a school for pastors in 1931.

Močnik's legacy was carved through hardship and relentless faith. From the moment he chose life on a bridge in Bremerhaven to his bold witness across Croatia and beyond, Albin Močnik became a pioneer of hope. His story is a testimony to the transformative power of the gospel and the courage of those who carry it to new frontiers.

Adapted from the Encyclopedia of Seventh-day Adventists, available at encyclopedia.adventist.org.

Part I: Overview

Key Text: Revelation 1:1, 2

Study Focus: Heb. 1:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:15–17; 2 Pet. 1:18–21; Exod. 17:14; Rev. 1:19; Ezek. 4:1–8.

Introduction

This week's lesson focuses on how God communicated to the prophets and how this communication resulted in the variety of writings that we see in the Bible. Since the Fall, as the first lesson pointed out, humans have lost direct access to God. Through revelation-inspiration, however, God connected with fallen humanity and communicated His will through the prophets and other contributors to the Bible. Scripture testifies to both revelation and inspiration in the biblical writers and should be the starting place for understanding this divine-human process. Ellen G. White understood this process from experience and from her own study of Scripture. The lesson thus moves from Scripture to her own experience of revelation-inspiration.

Part II: Commentary

1. General Revelation Versus Special Revelation

Theologians distinguish between two types of revelation: general and special. General revelation refers to God's self-disclosure through nature, history, and human experience, making Him known to all people in all places (Dan. 2:21; Rom. 2:11–16; Acts 14:16, 17). Psalm 19:1, 2 affirms that creation declares God's glory; yet, this revelation remains broad and imprecise. In contrast, special revelation is God's direct communication to specific individuals at particular times and places, revealing truths necessary for a redemptive relationship with Him (Deut. 29:29; Heb. 1:1, 2). Because of humanity's fall, general revelation alone was insufficient, as people needed clearer divine guidance to overcome their spiritual limitations (1 Cor. 2:14).

Special revelation uncovers truths about God that humans cannot discover independently. The biblical terms for "reveal" (Hebrew galah, Amos 3:7; Greek apokaluptō, Rom. 1:17) convey the idea of unveiling hidden knowledge. Revelation can be described as God's disclosure of Himself and His will to a chosen instrument, imparting knowledge unattainable by human effort. The Bible itself is the record of this special revelation, culminating in Jesus Christ, who, from Genesis 3:15 onward, stands as the ultimate focus of God's divine communication.

2. Inspiration

Revelation was a vertical event in which God communicated truth to human recipients, while inspiration was the horizontal process of preserving and transmitting that truth to others. This process occurred through both oral proclamation and the writing of Scripture. Many prophetic messages were first spoken before being recorded (Isa. 7:3, 4; Jer. 7:2), as was Jesus' teaching (Matthew 5–7). Scripture is the culmination of revelation, serving as the authoritative deposit of divine truth for doctrinal and spiritual guidance. As the final form of special revelation, the Bible attests to its own inspiration. Paul declared that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. 3:16, NKJV), using the term theopneustos, meaning "God-breathed." This meaning affirms that the entire Bible, not just parts, was divinely inspired, making it fully trustworthy for teaching and instruction.

The process of inspiration involved human writers whom the Holy Spirit guided. Peter emphasized this notion when he wrote, "Holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21, NKJV). The Greek word pheromenoi ("moved") suggests the Spirit carried them along, ensuring that Scripture was not merely a human invention. Inspiration can be described as a divine act, enabling prophets to receive and communicate revelation authoritatively and trustworthily. This divine initiative ensured the accurate preservation of God's truth through written Scripture, as seen when Moses was commanded to record God's words (Exod. 17:14, Deut. 31:9). Later, Joshua reinforced the importance of obeying what was written in the Book of the Law (Josh. 23:6), which highlighted the enduring role of inspired Scripture in guiding God's people.

3. God's Special Revelation in Scripture

Revelation and inspiration functioned together in God's communication of His will to humanity. Revelation was the vertical act of God's disclosing divine truth through dreams, visions, or direct instruction to the prophet. This movement was from God to humans. Inspiration was the horizontal process in which prophets, guided by God, faithfully transmitted the revealed truth to others. This occurred through oral proclamation and inspiration, the writing of that which would become Scripture.

Throughout this process, the prophets were the human link between revelation and inspiration. Through inspiration, they received divine truth and conveyed it reliably to their intended audience. The movement of inspiration was from inspired humans to other humans, ensuring that God's message remained trustworthy and authoritative across generations. In this way, the Bible, God's Word, was transmitted to humanity.

4. The Different Manifestations of Revelation-Inspiration in Scripture

God revealed His will using various methods, ensuring both revelation (His truth made known) and inspiration (its faithful transmission and preservation). Some of these methods are as follows:

- (a) Theophanies—Visible appearances of God (Gen. 17:1, Exod. 33:11) that revealed His presence and inspired prophets.
- (b) Dreams and Visions—Divine messages conveyed and later recorded (Num. 12:6, Dan. 2:19).
- (c) Angelic Messengers—Angels who delivered revelations (Dan. 10:11, Luke 2:8–14).
- (d) Casting of Lots—God’s guidance in decision-making (Num. 26:55, Acts 1:21–26).
- (e) Urim and Thummim—Divine judgment through the high priest (Exod. 28:30).
- (f) Divine Speech—God’s direct words, later inscripturated (Exod. 20:3–17).
- (g) Miracles and Signs—Acts revealing God’s power, recorded for future generations (Exodus 7–14).
- (h) Jesus Christ—The ultimate revelation, His life and teachings preserved in Scripture.

Revelation made God’s truth known, while inspiration ensured its faithful communication.

5. Ellen G. White claimed to experience revelation-inspiration but gave the Bible a unique status.

Having established the vertical and horizontal aspects of God’s communication, we can now examine Ellen G. White’s experience of revelation-inspiration. If her prophetic gift was authentic, it would align with the biblical writers’ experience. This harmony is precisely what we find in her own testimony. She stated, “I am just as dependent upon the Spirit of the Lord in relating or writing a vision, as in having the vision.” —Ellen G. White, Spiritual Gifts, vol. 2, p. 293, emphasis supplied.

Ellen White’s prophetic experience mirrored the biblical pattern, where revelation and inspiration functioned together. The vertical aspect—“having the vision”—was central to her ministry. During seventy years, she received approximately one thousand dreams and visions on various subjects, including personal admonition, church governance, education, health, theology, and the great controversy between Christ and Satan. She described these experiences as being taken into God’s presence, seeing past and future events, and receiving divine direction.

The horizontal aspect—“relating or writing a vision”—was equally crucial. Shortly after her first vision in 1844, she was instructed to share what she had seen, initiating a lifelong task. Her visions, which could last minutes to hours, often required weeks or months to record. She noted that she did not always immediately recall the vision but that it would return clearly when she was writing or speaking in a relevant setting.

It is important to note that not all her writings stemmed directly from visions. She used memory, cross-referencing, and historical research, particularly in works such as The Great Controversy. She also borrowed and adapted expressions from other writers when they effectively conveyed her message. As did Paul, she sometimes applied divinely revealed principles to specific situations without having received a new vision.

Seventh-day Adventists believe that Ellen G. White's experience of inspiration was identical to that of biblical writers. As she stated in 1876: "In ancient times God spoke to men by the mouth of prophets and apostles. In these days He speaks to them by the testimonies of His Spirit." —Testimonies for the Church, vol. 4, pp. 147, 148.

At this point, questions may arise about the relationship between Ellen G. White's writings and the Bible. If her inspiration was the same as the Bible writers, then aren't her visions and writings equal to the Bible in every way and, thus, an addition to the canon of Scripture? This issue will be dealt with later, in lesson 10, which deals with prophetic authority. For now, we may point out that, although it is logical to maintain equality of revelation-inspiration experience among the Old Testament, New Testament, and the postcanonical gift of prophecy, the subject of authority and the canon of Scripture are different. While there are no degrees of inspiration, there are degrees of authority, and postcanonical prophets (such as Ellen G. White) do not have the same authority as the biblical canon (this commentary was based on Jud Lake, Ellen White Under Fire: Identifying the Mistakes of Her Critics [Nampa, ID: Pacific Press, 2010], chapter 5, pp. 90–102).

Part III: Life Application

The following life application questions, drawn from the above commentary, are offered to enrich your class discussion. Choose from among them, and from those in the lesson, the ones that will best engage your class in meaningful reflection.

- 1. How does general revelation (through nature, history, and human experience) impact your personal faith and understanding of God? Can you think of specific moments when you recognized God's presence in the natural world or through life events?
-

- 2. Because special revelation provides clearer knowledge of God's redemp- tive plan, how can you cultivate a deeper connection with Scripture as God's ultimate special revelation? What practical steps can you take to make Bible study a more transformative part of your daily life?

3. The Bible teaches us that Scripture is “God-breathed” (see 2 Tim. 3:16, NIV); yet, human authors wrote it under the Holy Spirit's guidance. How does this dual aspect of divine and human involvement in Scripture strengthen your confidence in its reliability and application to your life?
-

4. Revelation took various forms in Scripture, including dreams, visions, miracles, and direct speech from God. Have you ever experienced or known someone who has had a moment of divine guidance or insight in his or her life? How do you discern whether such experiences align with biblical truth?
-

5. Ellen G. White's experience of revelation and inspiration paralleled that of biblical prophets; yet, her writings do not hold the same authority as Scripture. How can her writings foster spiritual growth while maintaining the Bible as the ultimate authority?
-

6. Illumination differs from revelation-inspiration and occurs when the Holy Spirit helps the believer understand what has been revealed in Scripture (John 14:26, John 16:7–11). It is a gift to all believers, whereas revelation-inspiration is only for the prophets. How do you experience illumination when reading Scripture or Ellen G. White?
-

What would you give up for mission?

Got a sweet tooth? What if for one week, instead of buying your favorite dessert you gave the money to the Annual Sacrifice Offering for Global Mission? You could reach hearts for Jesus in our three greatest mission challenges: the 10/40 Window, the Urban Window, and the Post-Christian Window.

November 14*

is Annual Sacrifice Offering day. Write "Annual Sacrifice Offering" on your tithe envelope, or visit global-mission.org/aso

* Date may vary in other divisions

From the Office of Adventist Mission,
General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
12501 Old Columbia Pike,
Silver Spring, MD 20904, USA.

Have We Forgotten the Gift?

In every generation, God has spoken—through prophets, through Scripture, through His Spirit: Are we still listening?

This quarter, Pacific Press invites you to rediscover the Spirit of Prophecy as a living voice that still speaks divine insight today.

As you study this quarter's Sabbath School lesson, these books will guide you into a more thoughtful exploration of truth.

Perfect for small groups, personal study, prayer meetings, and home fellowships, these books are more than reading material, they're conversation starters and spiritual companions.

Let the Spirit of Prophecy bring your Sabbath School study and fellowship to life this quarter.

Three ways to order:

- 1 Local
Adventist Book Center
- 2 Call
1-800-765-6955
- 3 Shop
AdventistBookCenter.com

© 2025 Pacific Press® Publishing Association
Please contact your ABC for pricing in Canada.
2555901049

AdventistBookCenter.com

AdventistBookCenter

@AdventistBooks

@AdventistBooks